

Do you want to evaluate the impact of your intermediate care services?

Living Well in Communities will deliver a WebEx series on evaluation methodology, training people from health and social care organisations, who can then apply their skills and learning to evaluate intermediate care services in their area.

The series will take you through the different parts of evaluation needed to create a comprehensive evaluation plan and the sessions will use real examples where possible. This will enable you to:

- Develop outcomes for your service and create measures to evaluate the impact on people, staff and the organization
- Evidence how your resources and activities are linked to improving outcomes for people
- Test your theory for change by identifying assumptions and external factors that could affect the service's ability to deliver positive outcomes for people
- Use learning from the evaluation to inform future design and build a business case for your service

Who is this for?

The series is intended for people who have responsibility for planning and delivering intermediate care services. This could include managers, clinical leads and front line staff.

When is it?

Each session runs from 10-11am (June TBC). To be able to complete a thorough evaluation those who join should commit to the whole series.

Session 1	Introduction to outcomes focused evaluation	21st Feb 2018
Session 2	Measurement for evaluation	15th Mar 2018
Session 3	Inputs, activities, and the reach needed to deliver outcomes	5th Apr 2018
Session 4	Testing your model: assumptions and external factors	10th May 2018
Session 5	Learning from evaluation	21st Jun 2018

Register via Eventbrite

or email hcis.livingwell@nhs.net